It was a bright Sunday morning in early June, the right time to be leaving home. My three sisters and a brother had already gone before me; two other brothers had yet to make up their minds. They were still sleeping that morning, but my mother had got up early and cooked me a heavy breakfast, had stood wordlessly while I ate it, and had helped me pack up my belongings. There had been no fuss, no appeals, no attempts at advice or permission. The stooping figure of my mother was the last I saw of my country home as I left it to discover the world. She stood old and bent, silently watching me go, one hand raised in farewell and blessing, not questioning why I went. Then I turned the corner, and closed that part of my life forever.

It was 1934. I was nineteen years old with a firm belief in good future. I was excited, knowing I had far to go; but not as yet, how far. As I left home that morning and walked away from the sleeping village, it never occurred to me that others had done this before me.

I was propelled, of course, by the traditional forces that had sent many generations along this road - by the cottage walls narrowing like the arms of an iron maiden, the local girls whispering, "Marry, and settle down."

And now I was on my journey. Naturally, I was going to London; and it seemed equally obvious that I should go on foot. By the end of the day when I was really alone at last - I felt less and less excited and confident. As I walked through the dust a growing unwillingness weighed me down. The hot empty road - there were few motor cars then - reflected Sunday's waste and indifference. Through the solitary morning and afternoon I found myself wishing to hear the sound of hurrying footsteps coming after me and family voices calling me back.
